Minister Damon, after reading the weekly statement, referred to two letters in the BULLETIN criticising his exhibits of the finances. Although the letters were anonymous, they were apparently written by persons who had some acquaintance with finances, and the subject was of such public interest that he would take the trouble of making a reply to them. At the last meeting of the Council he had stated that all the claims against this Government up to April 1, so far as he could ascertain them, had been paid, the cash was on hand to meet them. The one exception was the claim of the Risdon Iron Works, and steps had been taken to see if they would accept Government bonds in settlement. He read a statement of the financial condition of the Government, concluding with the remark that he considered the Government was perfectly solvent.

(The statement is too lengthy for this report, but will appear in full in a later issue.)

The Minister of Finance in making his statement gave some verbal explanations in passing. Before concluding he referred to a published statement made by Mr. Spreckels in San Francisco, to the effect that the Provisional Government could not pay three months' subsidy to the Oceanic Steamship Co. When that statement was made there was only one month's subsidy due, and to-day there was only the subsidy for June to be paid.

Mr. Allen reported from the committee on Palace property, recommending that all the articles be carefully packed and safely stored for the present. Adopted.

President Dole submitted a request from the Hawaiian Rifle Association that the Government should pay their rent, on the ground that citizens who were enrolled for the defense of the Government made use of the range. The Executive Council recommended that the request be granted. Adopted.

Minister Smith submitted a report of the Kalalau expedition, which he had joined by steamer on Monday on account of the illness of the Marshal. He related the facts that led to the recall of the expedition by himself. He described the place where Koolau was stationed when he shot the two soldiers. There was no cave there at all—nothing but a shelf in places as narrow as two feet. On either side of a lehua tree Koolau had piled stones to a height of not more than a foot—there were few stones at the place that he could get. The man evidently lay down and looked out over a clearing about five feet wide, where he could see anybody coming up the steep and narrow trail before they could see him. He recommended that a reward be offered for the body of Koolau. In conclusion he wished to express his high opinion of the bravery of the men who had gone to Kalalau from the company in Honolulu. In answer to Mr. Morgan, he said the natives in the valley were glad Koolau's gang had been broken up.

Copies of the Military bill were distributed.

Minister Smith stated that the bill did not come from the Executive Council, which did not even have it before them.

President Dole suggested that the introduction of the bill be deferred until next meeting, so that members might have time to read it. Agreed.

Mr. Emmeluth presented a petition from residents of Palama and Kalihi for an improved water supply. Referred to Executive Council.

Minister Smith withdrew his bill to amend the Judiciary Act, where it prohibits District Magistrates from practicing law. He had discovered that the desired amendment had been passed by the last Legislature.

The bill to amend the Judiciary Act, so as to confer greater jurisdiction on certain District Magistrates was taken up.

President Dole said at first he was not in favor of this bill, but had become convinced it was necessary. He would prefer, rather than naming Districts, to mention such Districts as those being the seats of Circuit Courts.

Minister Smith thought it was better to have the bill state definitely the names of Districts.

Mr. Emmeluth moved an amendment in accordance with the advice of the chair. Lost.

The first section passed, also the whole bill, this being its second reading.

The Military Bill was again called up.

Mr. Brown moved it be laid on the table. Any bill that started in saying every able-bodied subject should be enrolled for military duty, without waiting to see whether he was a citizen or an alien, should be dropped.

Minister Damon considered the bill had some useful provisions and moved it be referred to a committee. Mr. Brown withdrew his motion and the bill was referred to a committee.

President Dole reminded the Council that the funeral of the three soldiers killed at Kalalau would take place from the Court House at 2 o'clock Sunday. The men had died in defense of the Government and their memories should be honored.

At 2:56 the Councils went into executive session.

THEY ALL COME BACK

The Troops Return From Kalalau

Without Koolau.

He Has Escaped Over the Dizzy Mountain Top.

When the steamer Iwalani was signaled early this morning everybody was on the qui vive for news of the expedition to rout the lepers' stronghold at Kalalau. The Iwalani docked at 7:30 o'clock at the Inter-Island wharf, where there was assembled a great crowd of eager spectators. In answer to a few inquiries from shore, it was learned that Koolau, the leper bandit, wife and child had not been caught, but had decamped over the mountains into, it is supposed, the Waimea valleys.

The whole expedition, including Attorney-General Smith and the eleven soldiers who went over on the Iwalani on Monday, had given up the chase and returned to town.

Different stories were circulated around town as to where Koolau had escaped. Some of the police officers were of the opinion that Koolau had scaled the cliffs and gone over to the Makaweli gulches. Others believed he was hiding in the Waimea mountains where there is an impenetrable jungle of scrub.

The soldiers were landed at the Inter-Island wharf, and waited there until the bodies of Privates John McCabe, John Anderson and Husb-berg, who were killed at Kalalau, were landed on a wagon. Zind cof- fins covered with wood enclosed the corpses. The camping outfit was also brought ashore and put on a dray. When everything was in readiness the column, headed by a squad of Co. A under Captain Ziegler, marched uptown to the funeral taps of a muffled drum. Following the wagons came Lieutenant G. W. R. King, in command of the Kalalau detachment, and Major J. W. Pratt. The bodies were taken to the undertaking rooms of H. H. Williams & Co.

Lieutenant King was seen by a BULLETIN reporter at the Government building and gave the following version of events previous to the chase being given up. Captain Larsen, in command of the expedition, went to Kekaha, where he had learned Koolau's sister resided. Larsen returned on Saturday night in a whaleboat with Koolau's sister and husband. On Sunday morning Larsen and King, with a squad of men, escorted Koolau's sister up the valley and pointed out to her where Koolau's stronghold was situated.

The woman went near the place and began calling to Koolau, saying that it was his sister that addressed him, and not to shoot, adding that they belonged to the same father and mother, and to let her go up to him. Receiving no reply she climbed up the trail, and found no one in the cave. She examined the place and found a pair of pants, a boy's cotton shirt, an eel, and a few shells lying on the slab of stone whence Koolau had done the shooting. The woman returned and told Larsen and King that Koolau was not there.

The party then went up, and sure enough the place was deserted, and there were no signs of a trail of any kind. The bandit had escaped without leaving any tracks. He could not have escaped below, as the trail was guarded by the police under Captain Larsen in the night, and the soldiers under Lieutenant King in the daytime. The conclusion was arrived at that he had escaped over- head. The cliffs above were a dense mass of brush and li leaves, and it was decidedly impracticable for anybody to pursue the fugitive.

On Monday the camp was broken up and the party returned from the upper valley to Camp Dole, Lieut. King and Major Pratt being the last to leave. In the afternoon orders were given to leave camp and go to Haena. Everything was packed in boats, and the party arrived at Haena at 6:30 o'clock Tuesday morning. The steamer Iwalani was sighted shortly afterward and signaled.

Attorney-General Smith came ashore from the steamer and, after hearing the reports, ordered the troops to embark on the Iwalani and go back to Kalalau Valley. Arriving there the expedition went ashore again and a squad of men escorted the Attorney-General to Koolau's stronghold. A minute examination was made of the place. The ledge on which Koolau did the shooting was between four and five feet wide and about six feet long. It afforded a natural barricade, and, according to Lieut. King, Koolau could have slaughtered a thousand men who attempted to reach him, if he had the required number of cartridges.

The men who were shot were thirty yards off at the time, and it would take at least five minutes to cover that distance if a rush was made, and only one man could go at a time. Nor was Koolau's bullet the only peril, but there was danger of slipping off the bluff down the precipices. The stronghold was pointed out to Koolau, it is said, as a safe place, by an old native at present residing in Nihaui.

THE LAST SHOT.

The last shot was fired on Wednesday, July 5th, when McCabe was fatally injured. Since then Koolau had not shown a sign of his whereabouts, whether he was in the valley or not, until the sister went up to the cave and found that he had decamped.

HOMEWARD BOUND.

After the party returned from the head of the valley orders were given to break up camp, and active preparations were made for the return to Honolulu. Yesterday (Wednesday) the expedition embarked on the Iwalani homeward bound, touching at Hanalei on the way.

INCIDENTAL.

The valley of Kalalau is a perfect little paradise and covered with fine growing taro. There is abundance of food and people living there do not have to work. There is, it is said, between three and four miles of taro growing in the valley.

Mitchell, a member of the police, and one of the expedition, stated this morning that Koolau would never shoot at anybody going after a dead or disabled body, as witness when the soldiers went after the dead bodies of Anderson and others. If he wanted to, he could have shot them dead.

The natives are very much scared of Koolau now, and when a native was in the valley he would keep glancing up for fear Koolau's bullet would find him.

An officer says: "It is impossible for any thousand men to capture Koolau. The best thing to do now is to get some native to give him a squaremeal of gin and trap him."
